About Us

The Plus Importance Project is a newly registered charity that improves understanding and inclusion of people in the + of LGBT+, defined as “sexualities, gender identities, relationship orientations and sex characteristics including, but not limited to, asexual, genderfluid, genderqueer, intersex, non-binary, pansexual, polyamorous and queer”.

As the UK’s first registered charity with a focus on the + of LGBT+, we aim to create a world where those who identify fully or partly in the + of LGBT+ experience equal rights, respect and representation.

We do this by:

1) Training and supporting organisations

We work with organisations to help them be more + inclusive. This includes running training sessions and providing a review service that identifies areas for improvement in an organisation’s policies, forms, web content etc.

2) Improving public awareness of identities in the +

This includes social media, appearances at events, media appearances/interactions and responding to public consultations.

3) Undertaking research

This includes conducting, collating and commissioning research on different identities and the experiences of people in the + of LGBT+.

4) Campaigning for the rights of people in the +

This includes responding to government consultations and meeting with MPs and other decision-makers.
